

What constitutes an indoor gathering?

The Government has classified an indoor gathering as something that "takes place within a single enclosed area (a single room or area)".

But there are places where the restrictions do not apply.

They are:

- Health care settings
- Pharmacies
- Food shops
- Schools
- Workplaces
- Public transport

The Government has specified that the "fewer than 100 people" and new spacing limit rules do apply in these places and situations:

- Cinemas and theatres
- Restaurants, cafes, pubs and clubs
- Weddings
- Funerals

When will these updated rules be put in place?

Immediately, it seems.

Mr Morrison was a little vague on this, but given he did not state a starting time for the rules — which he has clearly done for all other measures that have been announced in advance — it is fair to assume the rules are in place from now.

We hope to be able to provide more clarity soon.
